

Soft Power Health

Through healthcare service to people in need, we take a step towards making a more just world

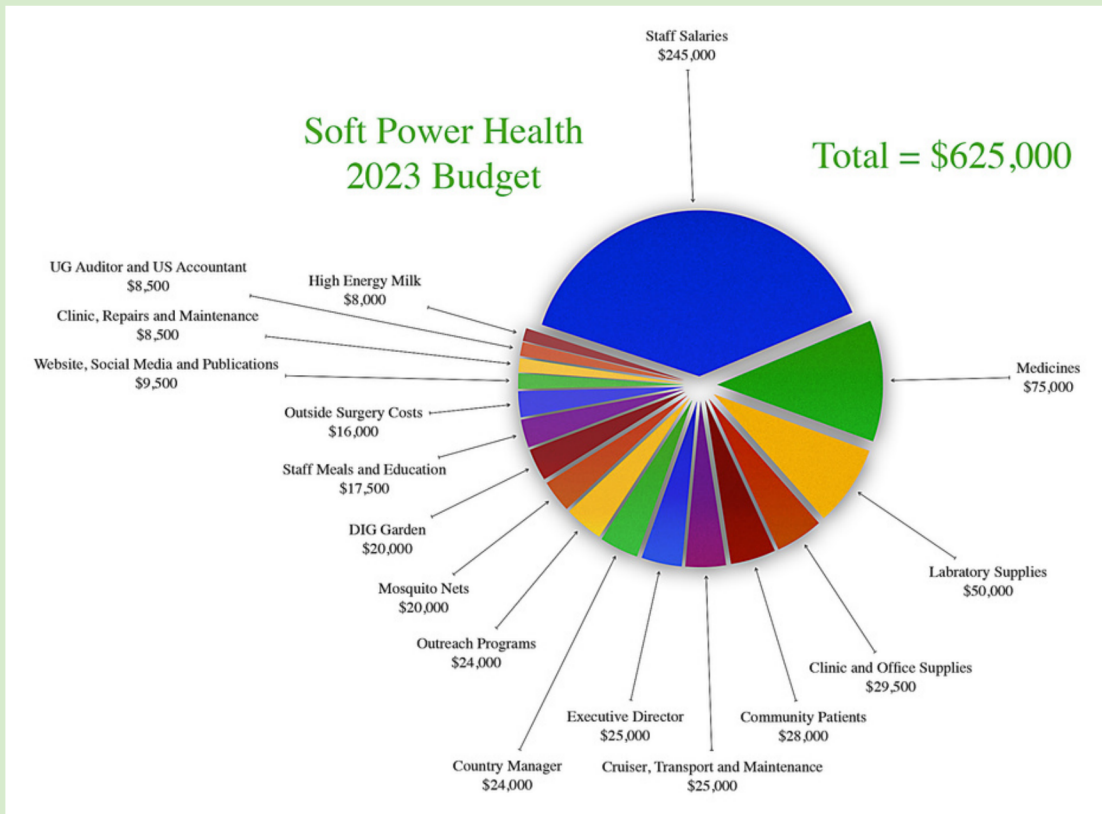

Nurse Annet educating at a malnutrition outreach education session.

Now in our 19th year of service, Soft Power Health's budget has grown since the early days, when we only had one outreach program and a clinic that saw 15 patients per day. Today, Soft Power Health employs 100 staff and reaches nearly 60,000 Ugandans each year with health education, prevention, and treatment. We keep administrative costs to a minimum so that dollars raised go directly into programming and treatment of patients.

Thanks to Country Manager Hannah Fromont's analysis of the budget, we have been able to make significant savings in areas, such as patient transport, staff dependent medical costs, kitchen food, high energy milk, and more. However, the war in Ukraine caused the price of fuel to double in the last year in Uganda, increasing the costs of nearly all goods and services. In addition, the Uganda National Social Security Fund and the Uganda Revenue Authority increased the amount of tax that employers pay on salaries by 12%. Taken together, these two factors caused our overall budget to leap to $625,000 USD this year.

Soft Power Health's goal remains to sustain itself for the long run and not to actively grow. Despite this goal, our expenses have increased as described above. As always, we make the best use of every dollar raised.

We would not be where we are today without you. Thank you very much – we really appreciate it!
